ASSET 01 / PUBLIC EDUCATIONAL CONTENT

Instagram carousel - “When is a design actually approved?”

Audience: independent social media designers in India. Placement: organic Instagram post on a relevant creator page, and permitted design communities. Call to action: “Try a 40-second demo.” Measure: profile-to-demo clicks, qualified interest, demo completions. Do not imply these assets were posted.

01	“Looks good” is not always a final approval. Client feedback can sound positive without saying which version is approved.
02	The problem: unclear versions. Is the thumbs-up for V1, the updated V2, or the idea itself?
03	One small change: ask for a decision. Share one design version and ask: Approve / Request changes.
04	Make the outcome easy to revisit. Keep the decision, comment, version and time together.
05	Try the FinalOK demo. See the flow in 40 seconds. No app install, no live signup needed.

Caption draft: “Design revisions are normal. Confusion over final approval does not have to be. FinalOK is a small concept for one version, one decision and one record. Explore the free demo - link in bio (planned).”

No engagement figures or test results are claimed. The carousel copy is an execution asset, not evidence of customer demand.

ASSET 02 / PERSONAL, PERMISSION-BASED OUTREACH

A 1-to-1 message with a specific use case

Audience: solo designers who publicly describe ongoing Instagram design work. Placement: a relevant opt-in community introduction or a respectful personal message after permission, only after the hiring exercise. Call to action: “Would a 2-minute demo be useful?” Measure: positive responses, demos booked, paid-pilot conversions.

Message draft - not sent

Hi [First name],

I came across your social media design work. I am testing a very small tool called FinalOK for one specific problem: confirming which design version a client has approved.

It lets a freelancer send a review link and receive a clear “Approve” or “Request changes” response. It is not meant to replace Canva or WhatsApp.

Would you be open to a two-minute demo when the pilot opens? No pressure if your current process works well.

Thanks,
Jagjeevan

Why this asset contrasts with the Instagram post

Carousel: broad, educational, awareness-oriented, one-to-many. Personal message: specific and conversational, designed to learn if a real workflow problem exists, one-to-one. Neither is assumed to convert; the experiment compares qualified conversations per relevant exposure.

Rules for ethical use

For this exercise: do not send the message, post the carousel, run ads, or contact customers. After the assignment, use genuine permission and community rules; avoid harvesting phone numbers or sending bulk unsolicited messages. Replace placeholders with verified, personally relevant details and never invent familiarity.
